

Hear from Victoria, a Ukrainian who moved with her family

Victoria:

Hi, my name is Vika. I am from Kherson. I have been living in Kyiv for the last eight years. During the war, we moved to London.

Interviewer:

How did you choose a city to move to?

Victoria:

It was actually a big debate in the family since we analyzed everything: language barriers, adaptation, bureaucracy. As a lawyer, I considered taxes, living, citizenship, visa conditions, refugee status, etc.

Interviewer:

What advice would you give women who have left their homes?

Victoria:

It always helps me to think in a perspective that is, I know what I am going to and how I go to it. How fast or slow, it doesn't matter. The main thing is that I have a goal and I achieve it and look around, look for opportunities. They will always find you.
